Auerbach's
 The story of Auerbach's, one of two department stores that once held an important place in Salt Lake business, began when Frederick, Samuel and Theodore Auerbach immigrated to the U.S. from Prussia in the 1850s, according to an article by Jack Goodman for "The Peoples of Utah" chronicling the famous Jewish settlers in Utah.
 The Auerbach brothers opened tent and wood shack stores in California during a gold rush in 1859 and later in Nevada before Frederick set his sights on Salt Lake City in 1864. He received an agreement from Brigham Young, which allowed him to open "The People's Store" and sell the merchandise he brought along with him.  Goodman notes the store had immediate success until it was rivaled by the creation of ZCMI, a department store which was owned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in 1868. For a brief time, Goodman said the Auerbachs and other non-LDS business owners struggled as a part of a short-lived "ideological-economic war" with a predominantly LDS territory.
 Nevertheless, Auerbach's survived and eventually expanded to a location on State Street and 300 South. Shoppers could find bargain clothing all the way to sporting goods and everything in between from the basement to the fifth floor of the building. It lasted there until the business closed in 1979. While the business no longer exists, it was clear how much of an impact Frederick Auerbach meant to Utah. A notice of his death was reported in a 1896 edition of the Deseret News, where it stated he died suddenly while on a trip to New York City. "The news of the death of Frederick H. Auerbach comes as a shock to the people of this State, who realize a severe loss in taking away of one of the foremost men,"

B-I-N-G-O WINS EQUAL FOOD DONATION

During the month of December we will be doing something different. For every five wins at the Carrington Court bingo table, the Activities department will be donating one dollar to the Utah Food Bank. At the end of December, we will tally the total wins and let everyone know our donation amount. We will then deliver the check to the Utah Food Bank during one of our Friday bus rides. Also, the top three bingo winners in the month of December will receive a special prize! Come on everyone, join in on the fun for a great cause.

Happy Birthday!
